

2011 Gunderson Award

Marshall R. Cleland, Ph.D

Cleland lives in Hauppauge, N.Y.

After he earned his Ph.D. in nuclear physics from Washington University in St. Louis, Mo., Cleland began his career as a physicist with the National Bureau of Standards. He then worked for many years, first as vice president and then as chairman, for Radiation Dynamics, Inc., before assuming his current position as technical advisor.

A graduate of the University of South Dakota with a B.A. in physics, Cleland is also a member of the American Nuclear Society, the American Physical Society, American Chemical Society, the New York Academy of Sciences and the Council on Ionizing Radiation Measurements and Standards.

Cleland is a technical advisor for IBA-RDI in Edgewood N.Y.

Cleland was also honored with the ASTM Hedgecock award for his sustained and exceptional contributions to the development and use of nuclear-related standards.